- There seems to me to be little reason to assign these tokens to Toronto. McLachlan (1886) lists them under Lower Canada, commenting, "The design of this piece is no doubt intended to represent agricultural interests, and it gives us an idea of old times in Canada, for up to twenty years ago the flail was the only means employed by the French Canadians in separating the grain from the straw." Nevertheless, a non-local classification would seem to be appropriate as there is no evidence that it was imported for a Canadian firm.
