MICHAEL MORSSSEN ORIGIN. gold. 14K. 38 mm. wt. e.f. $750.00
By 1917, the German U-boats had decreased the ability of the Canadians and Americans to send goods to Great Britain. Therefore, some way of increasing the shipping was required and the concrete ship was devised. The S.S. Concretia was designed by Charles Morssen, President of the Atlas Construction Co. with Prof. E. Brown of McGill University. It was the first concrete ship launched in America. (Nov. 12, 1917). Morssen was President of the Atlas Construction Co. from 1908-1920 and the company is still in existence. Brown was Vice-Dean of applied mechanics & hydraulics in the faculty of applied science. The medal was likely presented to one or both for its design and construction.

401. CAN. IDA St. AMANT (½ penny) Scott, "Copper Coins," p. 5, Lower Canada no. 1, but this is the undated var. It comes on flans of 2 sizes, this being the small flan type (25 mm.). Obv. CAN. IDA (but the serif on last "A" always lacking. Single letter punch. Rev. ST. AMANT (from a steel stamp). $50.00
There were 60 of these coins in a hoard of 12,000 lightweight coppers found in the vaults of the Bank of Montreal (before 1889) and described by McLachlan in "A hoard of Canadian coppers." He suggested that St. Amant was probably a merchant possibly in or around Quebec City, and that the stamp was of the type used for marking goods. Courteau suggested that it was probably a token from the St. Amant College. This is without doubt a colonial coin. Not long ago, I saw a specimen struck over a rare variant of Br. 997, Lees 5, Haxby-Willey 257. On some specimens the first initial of St. Amant can be partially detected, and may be an "O".
402. Coin Jewellery. "Pushed out" Canadian 10 ¢, Edw. VIII head which appears in high relief. Rev. patent date of Nov. 22, 1904. e.f. $65.00

THE STORY

In the days of old, when the bright dawn of the morning from the east came in the form of a soft golden glow, and the sun had just risen in the east, the birds were all awake and singing with a loud, cheerful strain. And though the air was cool, the sun's rays were warm and comforting. The children were all busy with their play, and the birds were all busy with their song. The world was full of life
 and joy, and the children were all happy and content. The birds were all
 busy with their song, and the children were all
 busy with their play. The world was full of life
 and joy, and the children were all happy and content.

THE COPPERS, A TRUE STORY

In the days of yore, when honor shone
Bright, from the cottage to the throne,
When virtue met its just reward,
From Princess to the lowest bard,
Such were the days when vice would shun
The dazzling blaze of virtue's sun;
When Knaves in black dismay would shrink,
And tremble on th'unhollow'd brink.
But now, most sure such days are gone,
Thus contemplated honest honest John,
As one day musing he did mope,
Fo want of custom to his shop.
Within the till, his eyes he cast,
His mind disturb'd, his face aghast;
There nought but heaps of Copper lay,
Instead of aught like Silver gray.
John wonder'd at the motley squad,
Fearing at least two thirds were bad;
When lo! a voice struck upon his ear
From one that seem'd unsull'd clear,
With Eagle-wings it proudly beckon'd,
And thus address'd, a "George the Second,"
"Old rusty lump in mouldy case,
How dare you look me in the face,
Or even think your form so fair,
With modern Copper to compare;
Go hide you in some beggar's wallet,
'Mong greasy crumbs, you'll help to fill it;
Or in some old Pawbroker's shop,
Or Hucksters' Stall, 'mong greasy soap,
There you may revel at your ease,
And such low mortals still may please;
While I with Gold and Silver bright,
At Balls and Plays will spend the night,
Perhaps at times for Port of Hoek,
I may be rank'd with "Gen'ral Brock."
The "Montreal" or "Ship", I'll own,
That weigh 100 to the pound;
Or even with s "Sheffield Token,"
Or "Birmingham", I may sit joking;
But with such ugly clumps as you,
I never will have aught to do."
To this in silence "George did listen,
As he had receiv'd a blessing,
Contented ne'er with such a class

He thus the "Eagle" did address—
"Vaunt on you silly shining bauble,
Made up of dross and light as stubble,
Though now you seem so wondrous clear,
But a short life you have to fear
I've seen the day when in my prime,
To shew your face, had been a crime;
So high against the Trader fair,
't would caus'd your maker swing in air.
But now the times seem as if fated.
For Rogues and Knaves be permitted
In quiet ease themselves to settle.
And fill the world with basest metal.
Such makes the laboring poor man shed
The pitying tear, for want of Bread;
Oblig'd to toil from day to day,
And then receive you for his pay,
Well may his wife and children mourn,
To see the wearied Sire return,
Another starving night to pass,
Occasion'd by your corrupt brass.
But mark me though I seem as rotten,
And by such fools as you forgotten:
The poor man's friend I'm in each case,
The Widow's stay, and chief solace.
You well at Balls and Plays may revel,
With Gold and Silver there may travel;
But in a rope they ought to choke,
Who rank'd you with a "Gen'ral Brock."
But hark the call to Legislation,
Our glorious pillars of the Nation;
They soon will cause such Rogues as you,
To our good land to bid adieu.
Then into some old Tinker's hovel,
You'll help to make a Pan or Shovel,
For sure I am that such base Metal,
Will never do to make a Kettle.
While I from age to age shall stand,
To shew the virtues of our land:
Virtues which ne'er can be attained
Unless by such bless'd laws maintain'd."
Confus'd the "Eagle" wond'ring stood,
Begg'd pardon that he'd been so rude;
John heard, care fled, he laugh'd his fill,
Clasp'd "George", and then shut in the Till.

THE CANADIAN MEDAL FOR THE UNITED STATES CENTENNIAL

Arlie Slabaugh's article in the Canadian Numismatic Journal on the Canadian medal for the U.S. Centennial interested me, particularly as the medal was a familiar one, having owned it several years ago. There were five exhibits by the Dominion of Canada Plumbago Co., Ottawa, and it isn't clear to me whether the medal was issued for the group of displays which were all graphite related, or whether it was awarded for the lump of graphite that Mr. Slabaugh was able to determine was the largest ever mined, measuring four by six feet. Of the four hundred and thirty-one exhibits in the category of mining and metallurgy, twenty-five medals were awarded; twenty-three of these were copper; the remaining two which includes the Plumbago Co. medal were the only silver medals. The company was also entitled to two medals by the United States Centennial Commission, one for "graphite and products manufactured therefrom", and the other for "plumbago crucibles."

In all, there were three hundred and forty-one of the Canadian Commission's medals awarded by the British judges. Twelve were in gold, one hundred and thirty-four in silver, and one hundred and ninety-five in copper. The dies were engraved by P. Tasset, a prominent French medalist and sculptor, and the medals struck at the Paris Mint on the order of J. Perrault, secretary of the Canadian Commission. McLachlan considered them to be "highly creditable as works of art." The impressive facilities of the Paris Mint enabled them to produce two hundred medals, delivered in Montreal two weeks from the time of being ordered by cable, and at a cost of one franc (nineteen cents) each, these presumably being the copper medals. Subsequent to the Centennial, the medal was stocked and given as an award at Dominion exhibitions, but these medals are virtually always unnamed.

Of the United States Centennial Commission copper medals, there were four hundred and one awarded to Canadian exhibitors who also received the accompanying diploma. There were only two categories of exhibits wherein Canadians went unrewarded by the Centennial Commission; that of "jewelry, watches, silverware, bronzes, etc." and "military and sporting arms, weapons, etc."

PRIVATELY PRINTED FOR THE AUTHOR.

Canadian Numismatics was originally published in the American Journal of Numismatics from 1879 to 1886. McLachlan then had it privately published in Montreal, with a few minor changes, in an edition limited to 100 numbered copies. The book is considered to be the finest individual work on Canadian numismatics, and much of the information has never appeared elsewhere. Due to the rarity of the book, and the poor paper that it was originally printed on, the publishers felt that a reprint would be desirable. This facsimile edition consists of 100 numbered copies, cloth bound, on Kilmory paper, [iv], 127 p., plus two plates of line drawings.
