France. Double deniers or double tournois. Examples of early French coins circulating in New France. "On that which was pointed out by the King's Attorney General that divers private parties, observing the increase in rating given to small change, especially liards and doubles, had brought a great quantity of it into this country, that it was to be presumed that by the next vessels, a greater quantity still would be brought, owing to the attraction of the profit on it, moreover that liards pass here at six deniers each and deniers at doubles and (that) lastly, the total ruin of the country would follow with this change remaining at such a rating, if there were not a suitable remedy applied. In order to obviate which, the Council declared that in future, commencing from this day, the said liards shall pass and be used but for three deniers each and the doubles at a denier and that the small deniers shall not be current." Shortt, Documents relating to Canadian currency, exchange and finance during the French period. Vol. I, p. 13, Order of the Superior Council of Quebec..., 1664.

98. So-called button money. FIRE BRIGADE / MONTREAL. In centre, arms of Montreal. Backmark of Steele & Johnson, Waterbury. brass shell-type, c1850's. Circulated as a ½ penny, even as late as this! Buttons, when divested of their shanks, found acceptance as small change in Lower Canada. I have had several of these Fire Brigade buttons - all hammered out. Another type was made by Chanteloup of Montreal, and there is another variety without backmark. scarce. $85.00

An interesting offering of Devins & Bolton countermarks. The undertypes represent the small change circulating in Montreal post 1862, and are probably the best indicators of the circulating copper medium at that late date.It had generally been considered that most of the lightweight coins had been withdrawn from circulation by the late 1830's, but perhaps old habits died hard, and the old ladies of the Bonsecours Market very likely continued their arbitrary acceptance and rejection of the varia crossing counter; certainly the firm of Devins & Bolton endorsed their acquiescence of the ancient Canadian coppers in a most interesting and prolific fashion.

MEDALS, LISTED CHRONOLOGICALLY

138. 1631. ARMANUS IOAN. CARD. DE RICHELIEU. High relief bust of Richelieu, to right. Rev. MENS SIDERA VOLVIT (Creative mind evolved the cosmos.) A cherub rotating a celestial plane with seven stars around the sphere of the earth. In exergue: 1631. Ler. 302. ar. cast by Jean Warin. early, likely contemporary. 51mm. 56.15 grams. $3000.00

This example is earlier than the struck specimen in the Bibliothèque Nationale which shows a much more advanced die flaw between the third and fourth planets. The specimen here is virtually identical with a specimen in lead in the British Museum which had been purchased in 1889 by F Parkes Weber from R. Frenzel. (See Jones, Mark, A Catalogue of the French Medals in the British Museum, Vol. 2. Hampshire, 1988.) Warin had been accused and convicted of counterfeiting. (Mazerolle, F Catalogue de l'Oeuvre de Jean Warin, Piganiol de la Force, Description historique de la ville de Paris, 1765.) It is claimed that the medal was a successful effort to flatter the Cardinal, the suggestion being that the Cardinal's intellect governed the celestial bodies (Jones). The relationship to Canada is negligible. The ill-fated Company of New France, also known as the Company of One Hundred Associates was Richelieu's brainchild, but the first ships sent out in 1627 were captured by the English, and Canada fell to Kirke in 1629. It was only restored, with Acadia, by the treaty of St. Germain-en-Laye in 1632. Restrike specimens of the medal occur in all major Canadian collections, and, if at all accepted, it is the earliest for Canada. No doubt Leroux, and others considered Richelieu's importance in colonial affairs, and the reverse is tantalizingly suggestive of his influence in the New World.

139. Same as preceding. ae. cast. 50mm. 45.84 grams. Appears to be an early piece; the die flaw between the third and fourth planets is less pronounced than the last. The casting is somewhat more careless; the V in ARMANVS is misshaped and resembles an L on angle. f-v.f. $650.00

140. 1758. ADML BOSCAWEN TOOK CAPE BRETON. Rev. FREDERICK KING OF PRUSSIA/ROSBACHNOV. A rare mule, more accurately a pièce de fantaisie. Unpublished in any known reference, but at least one other known, having been purchased in a 1988 sale. The obverse (Br.41/44, Betts 405/408) refers to an event that occurred in 1758; the reverse celebrates Frederick the Great's victories at Rosbach and Lissa in 1757. brass. v.f. $3500.00

141. 1759. Victories medal. Mule of reverses of Br. 49/50. Ler. 862. Betts 419. ar. v.f., small hole (2mm)

at 3 o'clock. very scarce in ar. $275.00

142. 1825. William Dummer Powell and Anne Murray. To celebrate the fiftieth Anniversary Upper Canada 3rd October 1825. Br. 183. ae. v.f.-e.f., rev. edge nick. very scarce. McLachlan assigned it "as of the highest degree of rarity, although it has appeared in sales rather frequently ..." (1886) $450.00
Excluding Nova Scotia, this may well be considered the first struck purely Canadian medal.

143. 1829. Arbitration medals. Ler. 830. Specimens in ae., gilt, and ar. unc. 3 pcs. $1000.00
Willem I of the Netherlands was requested to negotiate the issues relating to the boundary disputes between the United States and Canada, specifically "to define the line between New Brunswick and Lower Canada on the one hand and Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, and New York on the other." His award was rejected by the United States.

144. 1866. Death of Wolfe. Obv. Bare head of the artist, Benjamin West, to left. Behind head, vertically placed: WEST; below: 1738-1820; beneath truncation, engraver's name: W.WILSON. Rev. The famous death scene, the dying General Wolfe surrounded by a group of soldiers. Beneath, on curve: WILSON 1759 LONDON. Edge inscribed: ART UNION OF LONDON 1866. ar. 55mm. e.f. or better, slight mishandling in left obv. field. $475.00
The reverse is the only medallion depiction of this famous painting. It was reproduced in print form, and it has been said that "no other engraving has been so widely appreciated or has had such a large sale." (Webster, Clarence. Wolfe and the Artists, Toronto, 1930.) Laurence Brown stated, "It is probable that only thirty examples of each medal were struck in silver, these being awarded to those prizewinners whose names are recorded in the reports of the society." (British Historical Medals 1837-1901, London, 1987.)

Bigby arrived in British North America in 1818 as an assistant staff surgeon. The next year he took to studying the geology of Upper and Lower Canada. In the winter of 1819-20 he was appointed to the British party of the international boundary commission as assistant secretary and medical officer as provided for by the terms of the Treaty of Ghent in 1814. The principal surveyor of the party was David Thompson, the famous explorer. When in Montreal, Bigby met and was entertained by several of the old Nor'westers including William McGillivray and Pierre de Rocheblave. His Notes on the Geography and Geology of Lake Huron, 1823, was probably the first paper published on Canadian geology. Agelacrinites Dicksoni, as implied by the medal, was found in Canada in 1822, so the medal has a very specific relationship to Canada. In 1826 or 27 he returned to England and in 1850 published The Shoe and Canoe, a two volume memoir of his experiences with the boundary commission and other anecdotes of his seven years in Canada.
